TAINI JAMISON TROPHY

TAINI JAMISON TROPHY

Taini Jamison is an icon in New Zealand Netball – the first woman to coach a New Zealand team to victory in a World Championship, in 1967. So it's only fitting that a trophy fought for by the best in international Netball bears her name.

The Taini Jamison Trophy was introduced in 2008, to be contested when any netballing nation – other than Australia – plays the Silver Ferns at home.

A Mango Pare [hammerhead shark] pattern features around the top and base of the trophy, signifying strength, tenacity, perseverance, stealth, keen senses and cunning – all the assets of a champion team.

Taini Jamison's Rotorua Netball Maori motif is front and centre, honouring an exceptional Netball personality and the perfect example of someone who gives back to the sport she loves.
